My son's name is Andrew James or Drew James or just Drew #1mthe1

Since can Drew remember has been fascinated with his hands and always had a great sense of hand to eye coordination so sports came easy as well as academics I remember when he was real little he watched an entire segment on espn on how all the qbs in nfl each hold the football and he watched the entire thing and that's when I knew the determined look in his face and the willingness listen and learn from the greats was special. He's completely coachable which gives him a football IQ like no other. For Xmas he wanted bo Jackson randy moss déion21 and which jerseys speaks volumes. His hard work resonates on the field like no other I've seen at his age. #explorepage @andrew_james_ owe1 on IG

My name is Raequon Jr aka BamBam. One of my biggest things in life is putting God first. I've always dreamed of making the best grades in school, playing football at the highest level and being one of the top running backs of class of 2033. I started working out when I was 5 years old. I push myself everyday when I'm out on the field as well as when I'm training during off season. "Slow feet don't eat," is my motto. A few of my goals is to continue pushing myself to be better in every way on and off the field, to motivate others who come from small towns like myself, as well as maintaining on the honor roll list. One of my biggest achievements is no matter where I come from, even if it is from a small town in Virginia, I never give up on myself. One of biggest my challenges that I set for myself is to become faster, stronger, and more flexible for this upcoming season and to stay consistent on working to perfect my craft and skills.
