My name is Agni Rojas, and I'm a tattoo artist specializing in color and black and gray realism. My journey in this art has been a constant blend of discipline, passion, and evolution. From the beginning, I understood that tattooing isn't just about applying ink to skin, but about interpreting stories, emotions, and important moments in each person's life and transforming them into something that lasts forever.

One of my main goals has always been to take my work to a higher level, both technically and artistically. I strive to ensure that each piece has identity, depth, and character; not just another design, but a work of art that connects with the person wearing it. Over the years, I've worked to perfect realism, detail, shading, and color, because I believe that's where a piece truly comes to life.

Among my most important achievements is building a client base that trusts my work and my artistic vision. This trust has allowed me to create tattoos for all kinds of projects: from small pieces with deep meaning to large and complex works like full sleeves, back pieces, and custom designs. I also consider it an achievement to have been able to take my work to new places and audiences, demonstrating that art has no borders when it is done with commitment and quality. Challenges have been a fundamental part of my growth. Starting over in a different country, adapting to new cultures, work styles, and client expectations has been a huge challenge, but also one of the most valuable experiences of my career. Each change has forced me to improve, to be more professional, and to have even more faith in my talent and work ethic. Today, I continue moving forward with the same motivation as at the beginning, focused on creating pieces that not only look good but also have real meaning for each client. My goal is to continue growing as an artist, expand my work, and leave a positive mark on every person who decides to entrust me with their skin to tell their story.

My Name is Alex Asher.

I build confidence for a living.

The kind that shows up when a man stops avoiding mirrors, stops hiding under hats, and stops feeling like his appearance is a negotiation every time he walks into a room. My craft is scalp micropigmentation, SMP, the art of creating the illusion of a full, natural hairline by placing thousands of micro impressions, dot by dot, with so much precision that most people can't explain what changed. They just look at you and say, "I don't know what you did, but you look better."

That's what I chase. Results that feel like relief.

My goals aren't about being the biggest. They're about being undeniable.

I'm proud of what I've built over the past several years. I've helped thousands of men step back into their lives with confidence. Men who felt defeated, embarrassed, and stuck, who now walk differently, speak differently, and show up differently. Along the way, I've been recognized in the industry and awarded among the best SMP artists in the USA, an honor I'll never take lightly. Because every client who sits in my chair arrives with a story, and my job is to respect it.

What drives me now is deeper than money. Money is a scorecard. Impact is the mission. I want to take men who feel like they're fading and give them something back. Pride. Presence. Control. I also want to elevate this industry, because I've seen what happens when it's treated like a hustle. I've seen botched work, blowouts, careless pigment placement, and clients who spent thousands only to feel worse than before. I've met men who were embarrassed to even ask for help because they didn't want to get scammed again.

That's why my standard is obsessive. When someone trusts you with their appearance, they're trusting you with their identity.

One of my biggest goals is education, raising the bar for how SMP is done and how it's taught. I want to train artists who respect the craft, not people chasing a trend. I want them to understand this isn't just about dots. It's about symmetry, restraint, patience, and honesty. It's about doing the right thing even when nobody would know if you cut corners.

I'm still building. Still learning. Still sharpening my eye. Still chasing mastery. I want to expand, create more opportunities, and leave a legacy where clients don't just say, "He gave me a hairline," but, "He gave me my confidence back."

If you've ever had to rebuild your life, you know what it feels like to stare at the pieces and wonder if it's even worth trying. I'm proof that it is. Reinvention is real if you're willing to work like your excuses aren't allowed in the room.

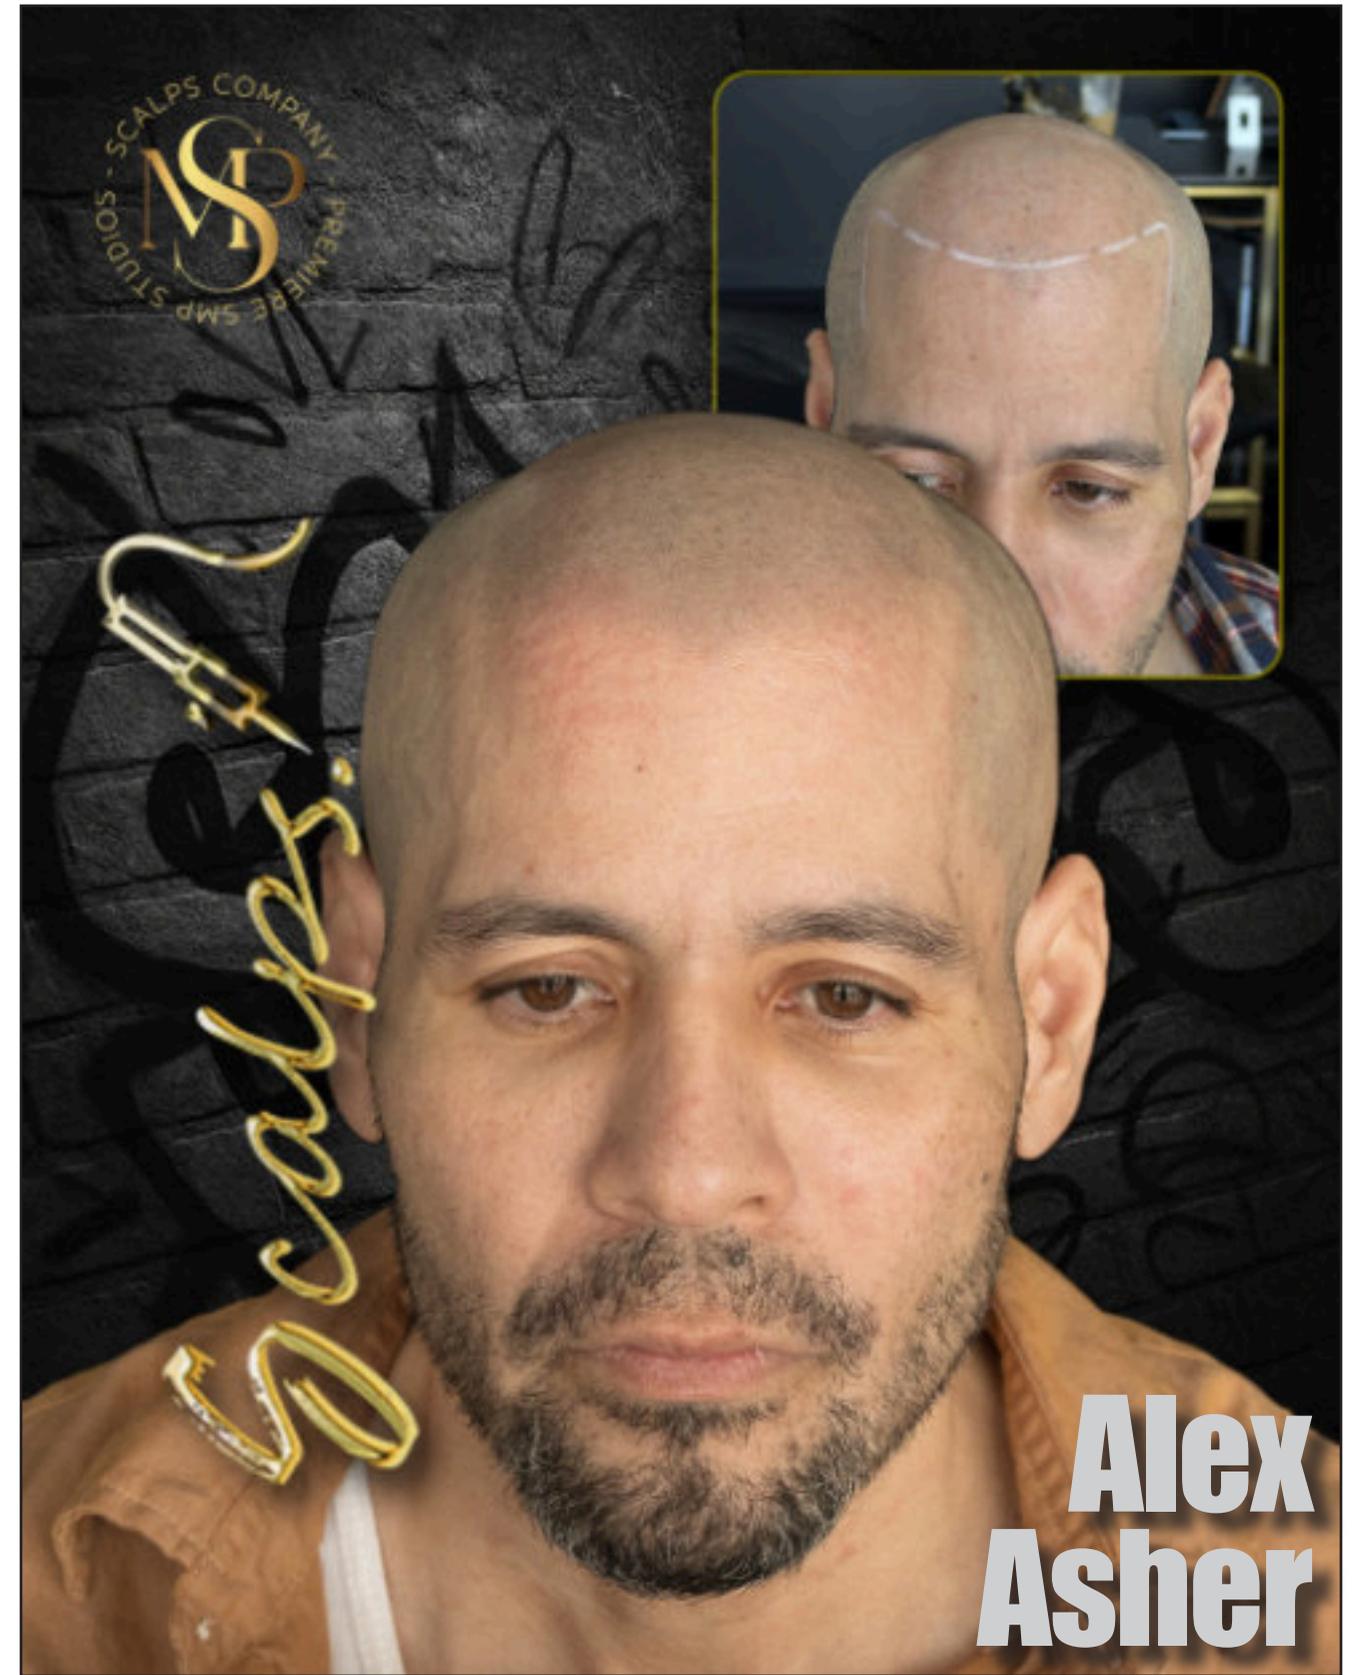

My name is Alex Asher.

And I'm not here to blend in. I'm here to set the standard.

Carter is an emerging model bringing fresh, authentic energy to the industry in 2025. Known for her beauty, creativity, and humor, she is dedicated to launching a dynamic career while remaining grounded in her most important role: a devoted wife and mother. Carter believes that professional success and family life aren't mutually exclusive, but rather fuel each other.

When she's not on set, she can be found with her family, finding balance in the simple moments that inspire her work. Her goals for 2026 are to form professional relationships that will elevate over time and further grow her already well-established social media presence. I recently won the 1st runner-up title in the Ms. Full-figured NC pageant in May 2024. Additionally, I secured the 4th place in the 18th annual Vogue Modeling Competition. Throughout my modeling career, I've had the privilege of walking for over 20 runway shows, including an international event in Cozumel, Mexico.

As a versatile model, I've worked in various fields, including international, runway, promotional, glamour, commercial, catalog, editorial, petite, swimwear, and fashion brand modeling. My modeling journey has taken me to over 20 magazine publications, with several being international. I've also graced the covers of three international magazines.

Furthermore, I'm the brand ambassador for four up-and-coming brands: Humble Butterfly, Rep Plus, AtOnce Designs, and Dimples Boutique. With almost two years of modeling experience, I'm passionate about my craft and dedicated to providing my clients with exceptional results.
